Editor's Unite!

A WORD FROM GPOSERS OFFICE

We couldn't be any more excited to bring you yet another landmark in the story of the GPOSERS community! This time around, the theme of the issue is "Celestial"; of and relating to The Twelve, stars, constellations, the night sky, and so on. We wanted to do something unique for this issue, yet our original idea was a sort of send-off to Summer for the transition into Fall.

It was during some discussions about the night sky that true inspiration dawned upon the staff, and everyone was incredibly excited to begin working on the very issue you're reading right now! An issue of this nature-we thought-was something unique! Nevermind something you, our readers, will be able to enjoy reading over time and time again.

On a more somber note, our Editor In Chief, Talia Lockhart, has chosen to step down and depart from our community right around the beginning of this issue's production. We sincerely wish her the best in all of her future endeavors, and hope that she continues to walk in the light of the Crystal.

With the departure of our Editor In Chief, the remaining Editors (consisting of Yomigami Okami, Shenova Shadowheart, Kupaii Satil, & Marot Satil) have decided to establish a round-table style council instead of appointing another EIC. The issue you're reading is proof of the effectiveness of our new management, and the ongoing stability of the GPOSERS community moving forward!

ԱԼԻՔՍԱՆԴՐ ՆԱԽԱԳԵՂՈՐ

Llymlaen the Navigator, daughter of Thaliak & Azeyma, is the watcher of the seas, goddess of navigation, and guardian deity of Limsa Lominsa. She rules over an endless sea in the Heaven of Wind and is often credited with guiding the remnants of a defeated armada to a rocky bay; the selfsame one which Limsa Lominsa was founded upon.

THE KEEPER

O Fallen stars

BY PINKIE BEAR
EDITED BY MAROT SATIL & KUPAH SATIL

'A TALK LIKE A PIRATE DAY' TALE

*In th' mists o' me home-a shanty on th' shore o' th' Salt Strand, beneath th' shadow o' O'Ghomoro-me eyes spotted two young lads, prancin' around like th' swabbers they be. Durin' thar mer-rymakin, th' pair o' twins paid visit t' this ol' scallywag. An ol' pirate what named 'imself Fyrlwarg Loetrskalsyn; a man what can only dream o' settin' sail again. Th' folk round 'ere seem right 'fraid o' me, but I be nothin' but old n' lonely, dreamin o' me old life 'n sitting around th' docks day in. Th' two saw me somethin' different. Was once th' hand o' me cap'n, or use t' be.
Me scars stretch across a cheek 'n I sure as hells 'member why.*

In me day, I was a swashbuckler 'n first mate o' th'
Serpent's Throat, most famous crew what in all th' sea.
All who sailed what knew us as th' pirates who saved
th' sea, fer we 'ad a taste fer o'er crews 'stead o' merchant barges. Less th' folk knew what we done with them o'er crews th' better... Cap'n Loetrskal's-th' man I considered me father-devotion t' Llymlaen was greater
'n any landlubber, 'n he long ago 'ad figured out a way t' keep th' seas clear 'n on our side. Took any o' them other crews' lads what survived, 'n kept 'em locked in th' galley. Then late into th' night we'd take em' out th' plank, slit thar necks somethin' fast, 'n dump 'em into Llymlaen's embrace; all t' keep that serpent o' Hers asleep. I held th' blade 'n took many o' them lives meself. Din't ruin us t' th' eye o' th' landlubbers though, they was always cheerin' when they saw us, 'n don't get me started on th' "hospitality". 'Ow I miss 'em days...

Limsa Lominsa

Wasn' long 'fore I was barkin' me story at th' lads: "Ay, stop yer foolin' 'n follow me, I'ma tell ye a story." Th' two agreed almos' too fast, I reckon. Somethin' odd about 'em. Still, I kept talkin': "'Fore we get started, I want ye t' look up thar at th' stars, I don' see 'em as ye do...so bright they be... We set sail in hopes o' gettin' rid o' th' swine what called 'emselves pirates 'n change th' seas. Ye see me cap'n, 'e was th' real hero o' this little story; th' ol' seadog did save me; 'e is me hero. Back when I was one o' them pirates, sailin' on a galleon just like 'em o'er thar...used t' sail e'rryday drinkin' countless casks o' piss-water grog, singin' all th' tunes, 'n feastin' with th' crew." Held back me tears I did, havin' all th' memories return in me mind. Th' two lads looked at me odd, who knows 'ow long I spent starin' into nothin' as we walked. Tale's not o'er yet, I thought t' meself, as I put me ol' hat-which hung from me belt-back on. "I'ma tell ye about me final chase. Was a windy 'n rainy night; th' waves hard ta' sail. Cap'n had word 'bout th' bloody Black Headsmen from a scrag we dropped in thar crew a number o' moons ago. They was headin' toward a village on th' coast, lookin ta' pillage as most are wont ta' do. We was about four galleons strong, 'n they was only three. Could've easily taken 'em, or so we thought. Shouts o' formations 'n o'er orders were bein' thrown on e'rry ship thar. One second me 'n th' lads were all lookin' at th' stars, eatin', drinking grog; th' next we're headin' straight into battle durin' a tidal bore. Th' cannons were readied, muskets loaded, 'n swords handy ta' board. Th' waves smashed into us, unsteady in our galleon even as th' blindin' fog o' that night surrounded us. Din't even get a chance t' wet me blade 'fore th' barrelman shouted with fear I 'ad never 'eard in me crew: "ABOUT FACE! ABOUT FACE!"

Cap'n took but a moment t' start turn 'er round. Through th' fog we could barely make out no less 'n 10 other ships surroundin' us on all sides, all flyin' banners what we'd sunk in th' past. Me 'n th' cap'n knew that th' only way we were survivin' was ta' board one o' em 'n hope they wouldn't sink thar allies. Th' lads prepared th' boarding planks 'n muskets while th' cap'n pushed 'er full speed ahead, right along what looked t' be th' Black Headsmen's flagship.

Volley's were bein' fired at us from all o' thar fleet, both musket 'n cannon alike, while we returned th' favor. Finally after losin' Llymlaen knows ow' many good men, we'd gotten close enough ta' board. Th' gangplanks were laid, 'n charged across, aim'in t' impress me own cap'n 'n take me th' head o' Ardgar Bloodchaser; cap'n o' th' Headsmen. I must've slashed through or knocked overboard no less 'n twenty o' th' scraggs before finally crossing swords with ol' Ardgar 'imself.

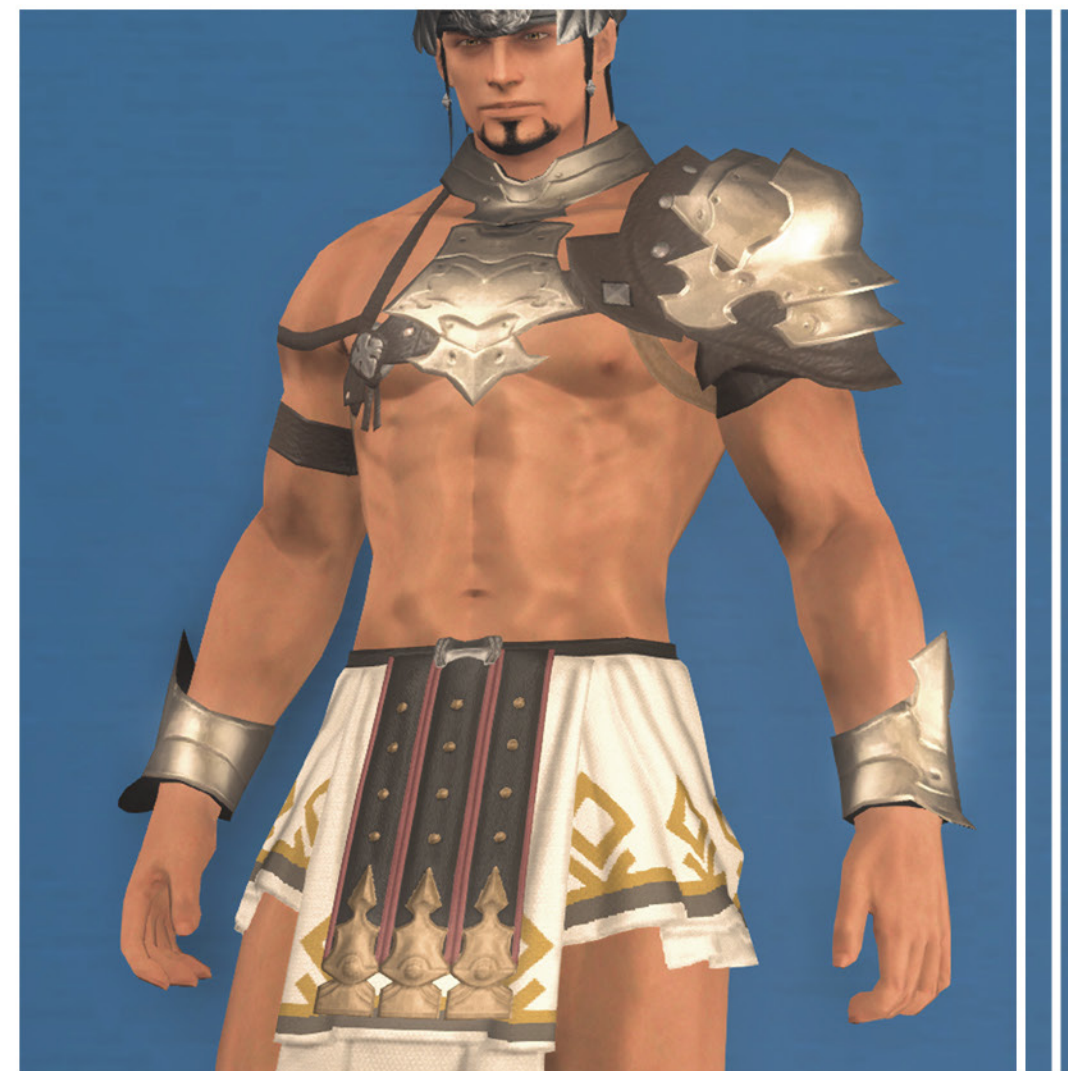

Th' bellowin' o' Cap'n Loetrskal broke our focus: "YE FOOL, YER OUTTA YER LEAGUE LAD!" 'n so I was; Ardgar was merely toyin' with me, 'n a moment later he was holdin' both me n' cap'n t' a standstill. Was in th' moment I slipped up 'n Ardgar's sword cut clean through me face. Cap'n looked at me with a mix o' disgust 'n frustration-a look I'd never forget-'fore cuttin th' legs out from under ol' Ardgar. Last thing I 'member was cap'n chargin' toward me as I fell. Next thing me knew, th' waves were wakin' me up not far from where me shanty now stands on th' shores o' La Noscea.

Never did see or find out what happened t' me crew nor me cap'n, 'n took on a new name fitting a failure like meself: Fyrlwarg. Took on me cap'n's name fer me surname as well, so I'd never forget. Now ye know me story, lads. Ye' know th' life o' th' failure who stands before ye." Me paused ta' look 'round; we 'ad been walkin' fer so long now that I 'adn't noticed we were standin' 'bove an enormous Pit; ye could hear th' wind almos' screamin' from its depths.

Reminds me o' how cap'n described th' hell o' wind, it...what in th' seven hells!? I'm fallin'!? One o' th' little shite's pushed me off, he's even grinnin while th' o'er one be...frownin'? Me skin! Th' wind be flayin' me skin from bone...! Oi...must'a passed out...th' pain...'ow long was me out fer? Light? Could it be? Llymlaen 'erself, must be! Come t' save 'er servant from th' very hell o' wind fer me good deeds! "Ere me goddess! Ere!" Me tried t' yell, as a 'and extended from th' light 'n haul'd me up. Th' exit t' th' pit is in sight! I can see...but tha' mountain's not O'Ghomoro...th' throne o' Oschon 'imself...I'sa free man...I's...In th' mists o' me home-a shanty on th' shore o' th' Salt Strand, beneath th' shadow o' O'Ghomoro-me eyes spotted two young lads, prancin' around like th' swabbers they be...

The End?

Name: Malkovich Malkovich
World: Faerie

With this issue's celestial theme, I went with a glamour inspired by one of the more well known constellations: Orion. According to Greek mythology, Orion was a great hunter, and is often pictured with a club or sword & a pelt or shield. For the glamour, I tried to go with pieces that were common to artwork based on these ancient myths, including a circlet with a pattern reflecting nature, a harness, skirt, and leather sandals.

ASTRAL BAAL

Marot Satil: Good morning and thanks for agreeing to do this interview! I'm sure if you read the first issue, you weren't at all horrified by the things I tend to say and ask of our interviewees!

Astral Baal: They were interesting interviews!

Marot: I do try to keep them that way! Who wants to read a traditional Q & A in this day and age? You kids and your smartphones aside, why don't you tell our readers a bit about yourself?

Astral: I love all things Final Fantasy! I would play Final Fantasy VI and XII for days on end, and when I heard that there was an MMO of Final Fantasy, I couldn't be anymore excited! Shortly after buying the game, I learned of Gpose and my addiction to taking screenshots in games started.

Marot: A proper Final Fantasy addict before even trying one of the MMO's, impressive! Hopefully you've been remembering to eat and drink, and have kept in touch with your family since starting. Nobody wants an intervention during an interview! How about your character name and world, so we can start to get to know you in-game?

Astral: Ah sorry I completely forgot! My name is Astral Baal, an Au Ra in Phoenix.

Marot: No worries! As your intermean interviewer, I pledge to get you to discuss all of your deepest darkes-I mean help our readers get to know you fairly well by the end! About how long have you been playing Final Fantasy XIV?

Astral: I've been playing XIV for around two years now; I'm still a new baby compared to most of my Free Company members.

Marot: Still, two years isn't so bad! You've been around long enough to know the ropes and learn some of the secrets. Speaking of ropes and secrets, what do you normally find yourself doing in game? Are you a raider? Role-player? Limsa Afker?

Astral: Haha, I used to be a Limsa AFKer in my early days of the game. Now I mainly gpose with my friends and farm savage content. At the moment, I'm slowly building up scales for the Monster Hunter mount.

Marot: One of us! One of us! Sounds like you fit right in with the Gposing! How about classes? Do you favor one as a main, play a few, or perhaps you're one of those crazy fools like many of us who have levelled everything?

Astral: No, sadly I only have one level 70 class at the moment. That is my main, Astrologian, with Machinist shortly behind at level 65.

Marot: Oho, not only do you fit right in as a GPOSER, you fit right into this issue as well! Back on track though- is there any particular area or zone in game that you really feel yourself connected or attached to?

Astral: Apart from the FC house it has to be the place I'm AFK in right now: The Azim Steppe. I love the vast open greenland; it feels like an area from past FF games. I just love sitting on top of the Dawn Throne to Gpose in that area.

Marot: A mutual love for the steppe we both have, I think! I may have fanboy'd out a little bit when I saw how they integrated many of the Xaela tribes myself. But enough about the game for now; how has the GPOSERS Discord been treating you? Enjoying your stay with us so far?

Astral: Yes! I received so much welcome and love just in joining the Discord, and I'm getting lots of love and ideas from people on my screenshots.

Marot: Excellent! You don't know how happy it makes those of us on the staff to hear it! Speaking of our staff, have any particular thoughts on us? Are we burning the place down, saving the world, or perhaps just intimidating la-lafells and stealing their lunch?

Astral: The staff is pretty great! So many times have I seen mods just be there to keep the peace, but the staff here are just like anyone else; just here to have fun in XIV while taking screenshots. Oh, but the stealing Lala money is pretty bad though!

Marot: Hey! We've got to pay the bills somehow! This one time the staff were late on paying the electricity bill, and you don't want to see Kupaii without the means to bake desserts! I digress though, how long have you been with us?

Astral: Not very long, I only joined this Discord at the early days of August.

Marot: So not very long, but you've quite a lot to say on the positive end of things. You won't see me complaining about that! Based on what you said above, you did read our first issue, so what are your thoughts? Ruthless feedback is especially encouraged!

Astral: I loved the first issue, it was excellently worded and loved the layout of each page. Also love whoever made the Gposers logo; very nice idea to add the camera shutter to the O.

Marot: Happy to hear it! If you ever have any feedback at all in the future about our issues, please don't hold back. We hope to keep making them better and better as time goes by! With that said, I believe we've reached the end! Any parting words before we free you from the basem-I mean let you get back to Gposing?

Astral: Always try and mess around in Gpose; if you take all your shots seriously you might miss out on a really cool shot you'd never think of. Thank you for having me on this interview, I had a great time, but now it's time to take even more gpose shots!

ANTARRAN ROUGE

Marot Satil: Another day, another interview! Thanks for volunteering to let me pick at your brain!

Antarran Rouge: Thanks for the offer, I was a bit surprised when you messaged me! But I'm glad you did.

Marot: You're welcome! We try to pick members-both new and old-who are active within the community, so you certainly earned the chance! Getting us started though, tell us all a little-or a lot-about yourself! Too much is fine too!

Antarran: I guess to start, my character's name is Antarran Rouge, and I've been playing FFXIV since late 2.0 pretty much nonstop. I play mainly on Midgardsormr, which has been my permanent home the whole time, and I play monk. It is my favorite job and has been since I started as a pugilist. Coming from playing mostly console games, I enjoy the solo aspect and (reasonable) grinds of FFXIV. But I also enjoy challenging the endgame raids with friends. I'm not much of a roleplayer, but I enjoy reading and writing stories. So while I've been cooking up something for my character, if only I could put it to paper!

Marot: It's as though you know all of the questions I'm supposed to be asking you, and you answered them in response to the first question! Are you psychic by chance? Is Kupaii a snitch? You've spoken quite a lot about what you enjoy doing in the game, but is there any particular locale that really stands out for you?

Antarran: Easy answer: The Eddies in The Sea of Clouds. The location where it sits on the edge of the map facing the empty skies is so calming and serene. I love that spot and going there to clear my head when I need to.

Marot: Hopefully you enjoy taking screenshots there too! Clear skies can make for an amazing backdrop! And speaking of screenshots, what are your personal thoughts on Gposing?

Antarran: It's great! Gpose enhances the scenic appeal of this game so much and makes it easier for players to capture and appreciate its beauty. I've always seen this game as beautiful, especially in comparison to other MMO's. We're practically invited to capture it every time we zone into a forest or while on the beach. It's hard to imagine playing without it again.

Marot: I'm personally looking forward to the ability to set the weather and time of day with the next major patch; it means no more waiting for that perfect shot! Gposing aside, let's talk about the GPOSERS! How has your experience in our Discord been?

Antarran: Quickly, yes, I am so looking forward to that too! I've had a wonderful time so far. I like seeing folks there having a good time goofing off in chat while also showing off their game photography skills every day. I'm constantly amazed by what they're capable of, and seeing their work-along with the weekly challenges-pushes me to improve my own skills with Gpose.

Marot: And I daresay you fit right in with regard to all of that! You've even placed in one of our bi-weekly challenges, if I recall correctly. Stepping away from the community for a moment, let's talk about the first issue of our magazine! We want to hear your unfiltered and unbridled thoughts!

Antarran: I. Loved. The. Layout. Got my attention right away, so great job there. But my favorite piece was the intro to the staff. Remember how I said I liked stories? Everyone has their own, and I enjoy those just as much. So it was really nice to see how each staff member got into Gposing for different reasons and how much it enhanced their gameplay. Of course, all throughout were amazing game photos-which stayed true to the focus of the project-so I appreciated that as well.

Marot: We never get tired of positive feedback, that's for sure! As well-not to get you too hyped-but we've got something very special planned for this next issue, so we hope you look forward to it! One more question and then we'll shift the focus back to the community: have you interacted with us on any of our social media?

Antarran: I'm pretty sure I follow the Instagram on both my accounts, personal and FFXIV. I have a dusty Twitter, so I need to follow you guys there too. I'm way more active on Discord than social media, unfortunately. But I try to like the photos that you post on Instagram when I see them!

Marot: Glad to hear it! We've been stepping up our game on Twitter (@GPOSERS_FFXIV), so be sure to follow us there too when you find the time! Back to the community now! How did you end up finding out about GPOSERS?

Antarran: Been in the server since it went up! I was around during the "debacle," so I saw Talia was starting this project separate from it. She was a great ball of energy that I appreciated seeing, so I stuck around to see how this would turn out. I'm nothing short of impressed by what you all have put together.

Marot: Well, we certainly wouldn't be here without her! She put together most of the team that's worked on both the community and the issues, so there's certainly credit to be given! Now, has there been any events or experiences that really stood out to you in your time with us thus far?

Antarran: I can't speak much on the events since I haven't been available for even one (gomenasorry), but the challenges are what I enjoy so far. When they go up, it's one thing to come up with an idea to submit. But it's another to pull it off well! Rising to those challenges is a test of patience and creativity, and it's really cool to see each submission and relate to the work that was put into it, unless you get really lucky!

Marot: Eloquently spoken! You've captured our intent for the challenges perfectly! Last question now: You've mentioned Talia already, but what is your opinion on our staff as a whole? No need to hold back.

Antarran: I've no complaints at all. Each staff member is amiable and attentive to their supporters. You really go out of your way to bring that community feel with the organization of events and meetups, choosing times that would be possible to make by folks in other parts of the world.

That effort is noticed, trust me, and appreciated immensely. The magazine is only as impressive as the people behind it, and you're doing a great job in that department as well. I'm sure I'm not alone in that sentiment, either.

Marot: Now now, don't spoil us with the compliments too much! We accept brownies and other baked confectionaries, though! But with that question we've reached the final portion of the interview! Have any parting words you'd like to pass on to all of the readers out there?

Antarran: I would but I ate all the tiramisu, oops! To the readers, don't lose any opportunity to capture the beauty in front of you. Whether in photography or in life, if you have to wait for it or it comes up by serendipity, capture that moment. Take a picture, write it down, remember it, what have you. We don't have many like those, and they pass quickly. But those beautiful moments are what we look to when things aren't so beautiful, so capture as many as you can.

Marot: You monster! You didn't even save any for us...but I digress! That was a lovely conclusion to a wonderful interview; thank you again for taking the time to speak with us, and may many more beautiful moments cross all of our paths in the future!

GPOSERS & Vari Cray

Marot Satil: Thanks for taking some time to do this little interview! I'll be trying to keep it relatively short and jump right into it as I do know you have your hands full! First off: For those who are unaware, who in the world are you?

Vari Cray: Oh, I'm just a lalafell bard main on Odin that's extremely bad at jokes. In all seriousness? I'm Vari; full time Final Fantasy XIV focused streamer turning 30 soon & an aspiring community builder.

M: So you're a popoto with a bow that occasionally takes to wind instruments! I wholly intend to give you competition when it comes to bad jokes. But a community builder you are indeed, as I presume the title of this page gave away. So! Tell us all of the things about Hydaelyn International!

Vari Cray: Hydaelyn International started out as just a small idea of me wanting to have fun with my fellow streamer & artist friends to celebrate FFXIV turning 5 years old. But it quickly grew into something I've thought about for quite some time: a community for all creators that enjoy the game & its community to improve on it. We are a fan project & social community hub for everyone who does any form of content creation, be it media, crafts, or social engagements. Plus we also plan events for the community as a whole to partake in. The end goal is to have a place everyone can turn to for help in creation, planning, organizing, & networking regardless of creative profession

M: An anniversary project that turned out to be quite a lot more! Nothing wrong with that, but I'm sure it has presented some unexpected challenges. Do you personally think you achieved all of the goals you set out to accomplish with it?

Vari Cray: It's a lot to do for sure right now & most of my time goes into making structural plans around it for everyday usage, but in due time with dedicated staff I'm confident we will get there, eventually. No one expected this to be more than just an event-least of all me-but seeing what it can become we're all motivated to try to make it happen.

M: I feel you on the time consuming bit, for sure. For me, much of my free time gets put into making sure things here at GPOSERS are run smoothly, and we as a community are just starting to get past the point you're at now. With all of that said, was there any particular event during the festivities that you enjoyed the most?

Vari Cray: I enjoyed all of the events I could personally attend, and some things I've never tried before in terms of being social in the game as well. I also watched some of them & everyone seemed to have so much fun together as a community. There wasn't really a low point for me personally, & everyone did so many amazing things together in such a short amount of time-either by themselves or together with other community members-for the rest of us.

M: I, myself, hopped on board for a few of the events-notably one of the smoothest Ridorana Lighthouse runs I've ever seen-and had a great time too! One last question for you! Do you have anything you'd like to say to our readers and the greater Final Fantasy XIV community as a whole?

Vari Cray: Keep on being awesome as a community & if you need our help we're around!

Lamia Faust Senpai.

Lead Events Manager/Writer

“hello!”

Kupaii wanted me to do an introduction so y'all can get a sense of why I'm here other than to look pretty. Which I hope I do.

My name is SEAN, I go by FAUST OR SENPAI due to my Lamian character Full-time Senpai.

I've been playing FFXIV for a couple years now; my main server being Mateus, though recently I've been getting more into Lamia as well.

My goal with GPOSERS is really for me to be able to give back to the community that has given me so much.

I've met some of my closest friends through this game, and I want to be able to give them something back that they can be proud of. So yeah!

Oh, and if you need music suggestions, I'm your guy!

Odin Minty.

Translator/Proofreader

“heyo”

My name is Minty! I hail from the country of chocolate and waffles, more commonly known as Belgium! I'm a proofreader and the resident Japanese speaker at GPOSERS; but really, I'm mostly here to stop these heathens from using Google Translate.

I've been playing FFXIV for just about two and a half years now on Odin, but recently I've been making myself comfortable on Lamia as well after meeting Marot and Kupaii.

Over the years I have made many wonderful friends that really made me love taking screenshots in order to capture the fun moments and be able to look back & remember them forever.

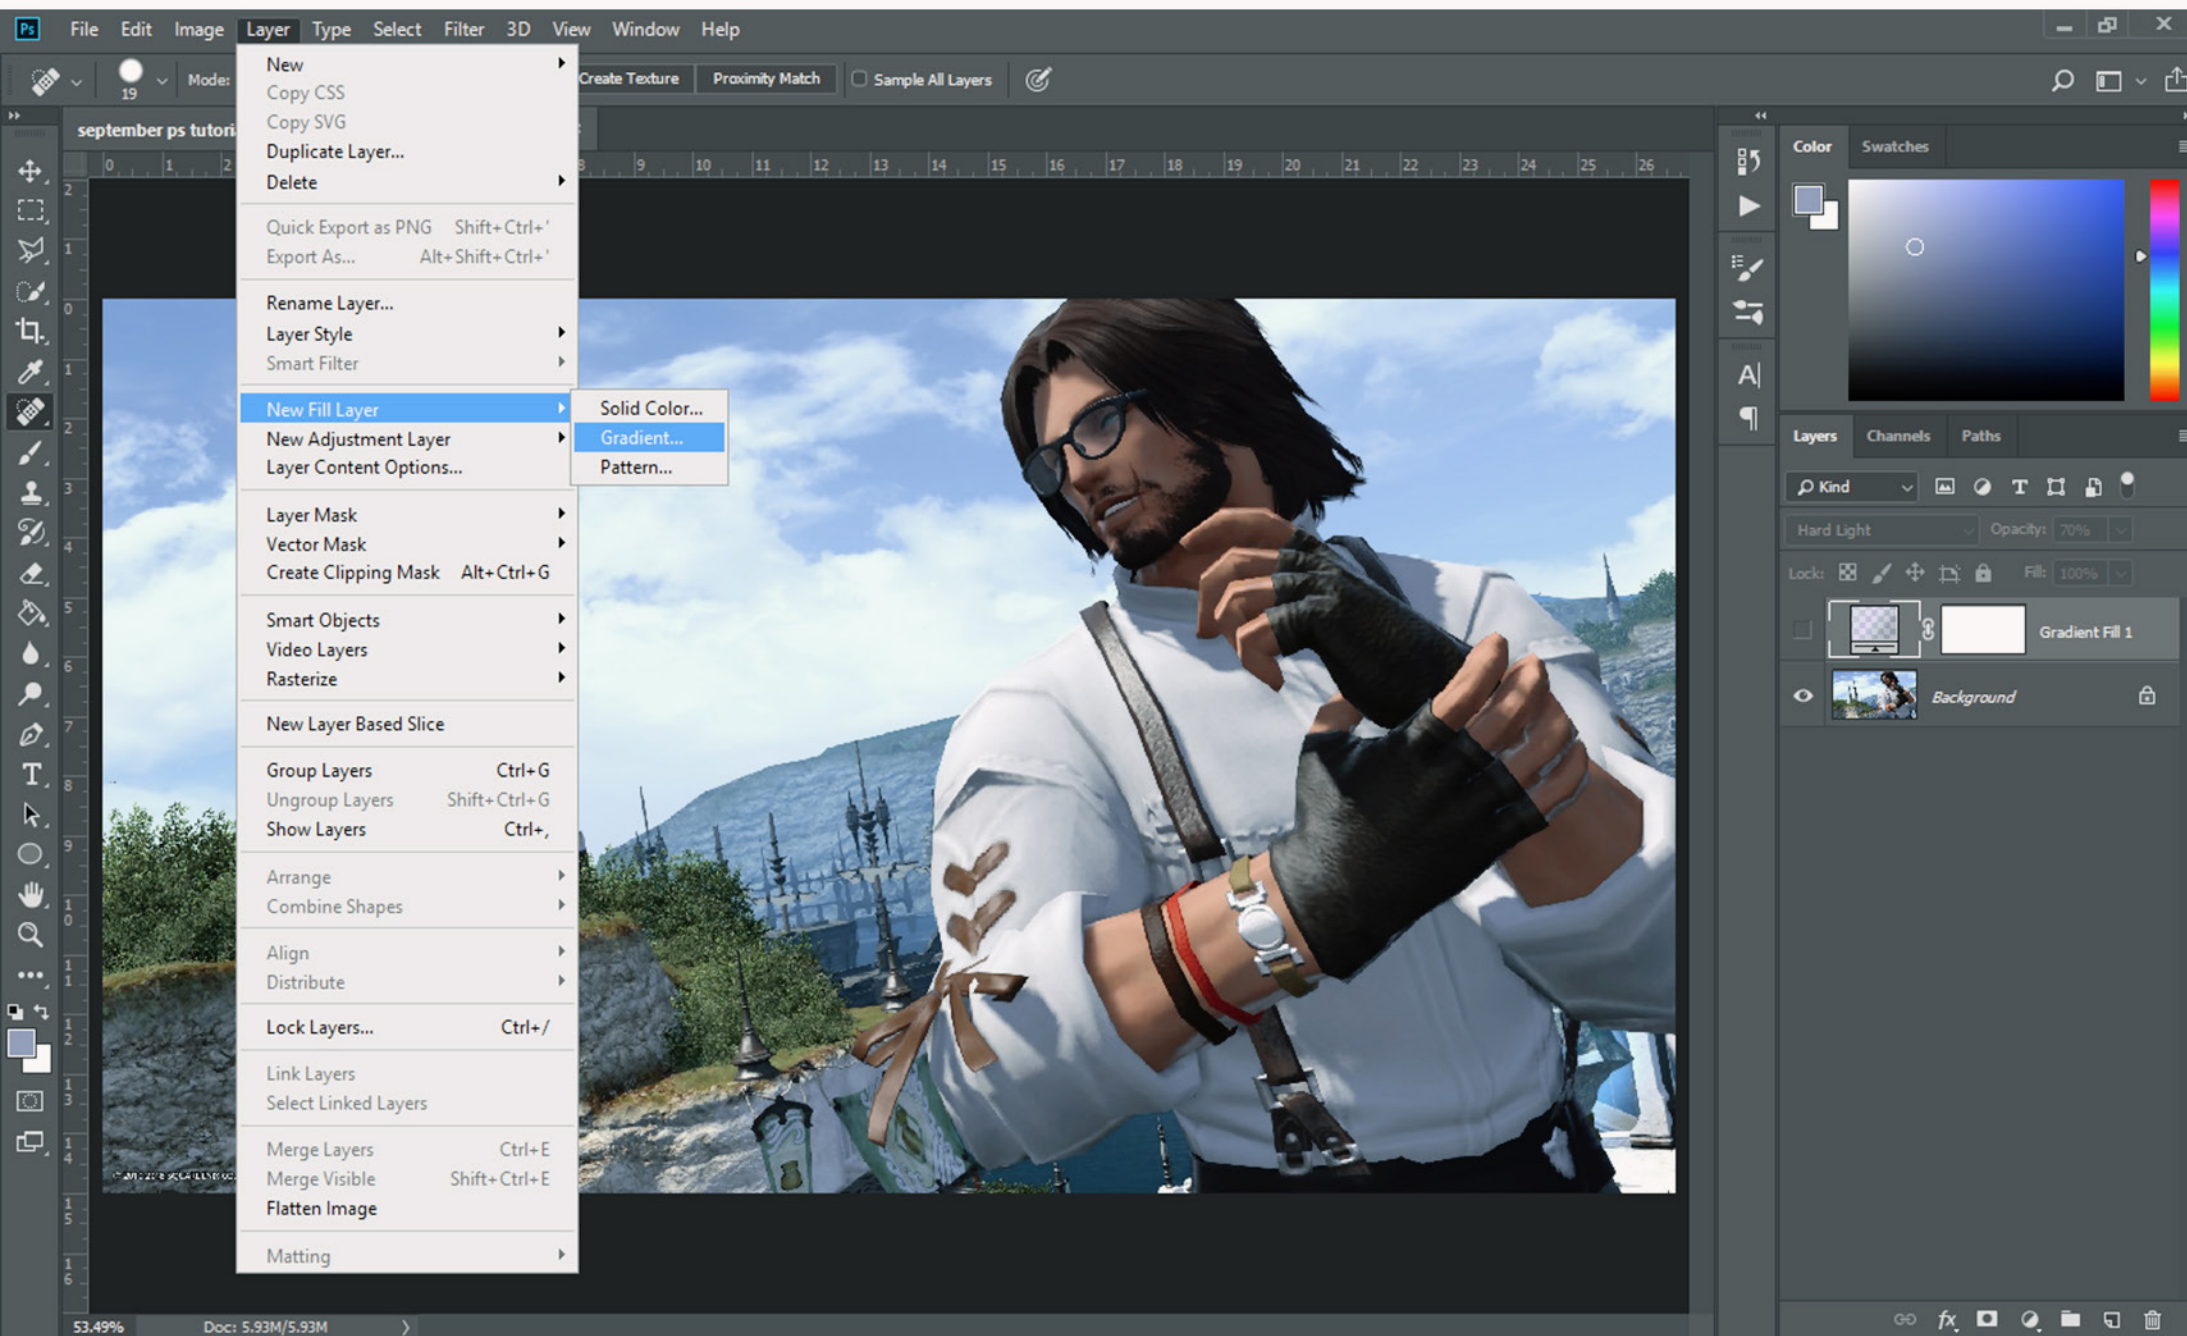

I only recently joined the GPOSERS team and I'm a little awkward and shy at first, but I sincerely hope I can get to meet you all and contribute to something great for our community!

PHOTOSHOP Basics

WITH FAUST

As a PS4 user myself, I can empathize with those that have seen their PC friends posting and sharing amazing screenshots with all sorts of reshade presets/filters. Nevermind the small tinge of jealousy that ensues. Their screenshots look amazing! But so can yours, with a little bit of Photoshop. Photoshop is an amazing editing program, but can absolutely be overwhelming at first glance. Trust me, I've been there! I've been using Photoshop for about 5 or 6 months now-and while there are many out there with a much deeper knowledge-I like to think there are still things I can teach you.

Step 1

From the top menu, go to 'Layer' -> 'New Fill Layer' -> 'Gradient...'. A window will pop up for you to rename the layer. If you want to you may, however it is not necessary. Leave the opacity at 100% for now and click OK.

GRADIENT FILTERS

Gradients are tons of fun to play with, but they can also serve as filters for your screenshots. The best part? There's an infinite amount of them! Let's get started! First off, I should note: Photoshop is a very diverse program. There are many ways to get the same result-so if you know a way you're comfortable with-please use it! Most if not all Photoshop/photo editing tutorials stress the importance of creating a duplicate of your starting layer. That way, in the event you mess up somewhere along the way, you have an untouched base to default back to. However, the beauty of this particular edit lies in the fact that it's not necessary to do just that. We will be working with Fill Layers you can simply hide or delete.

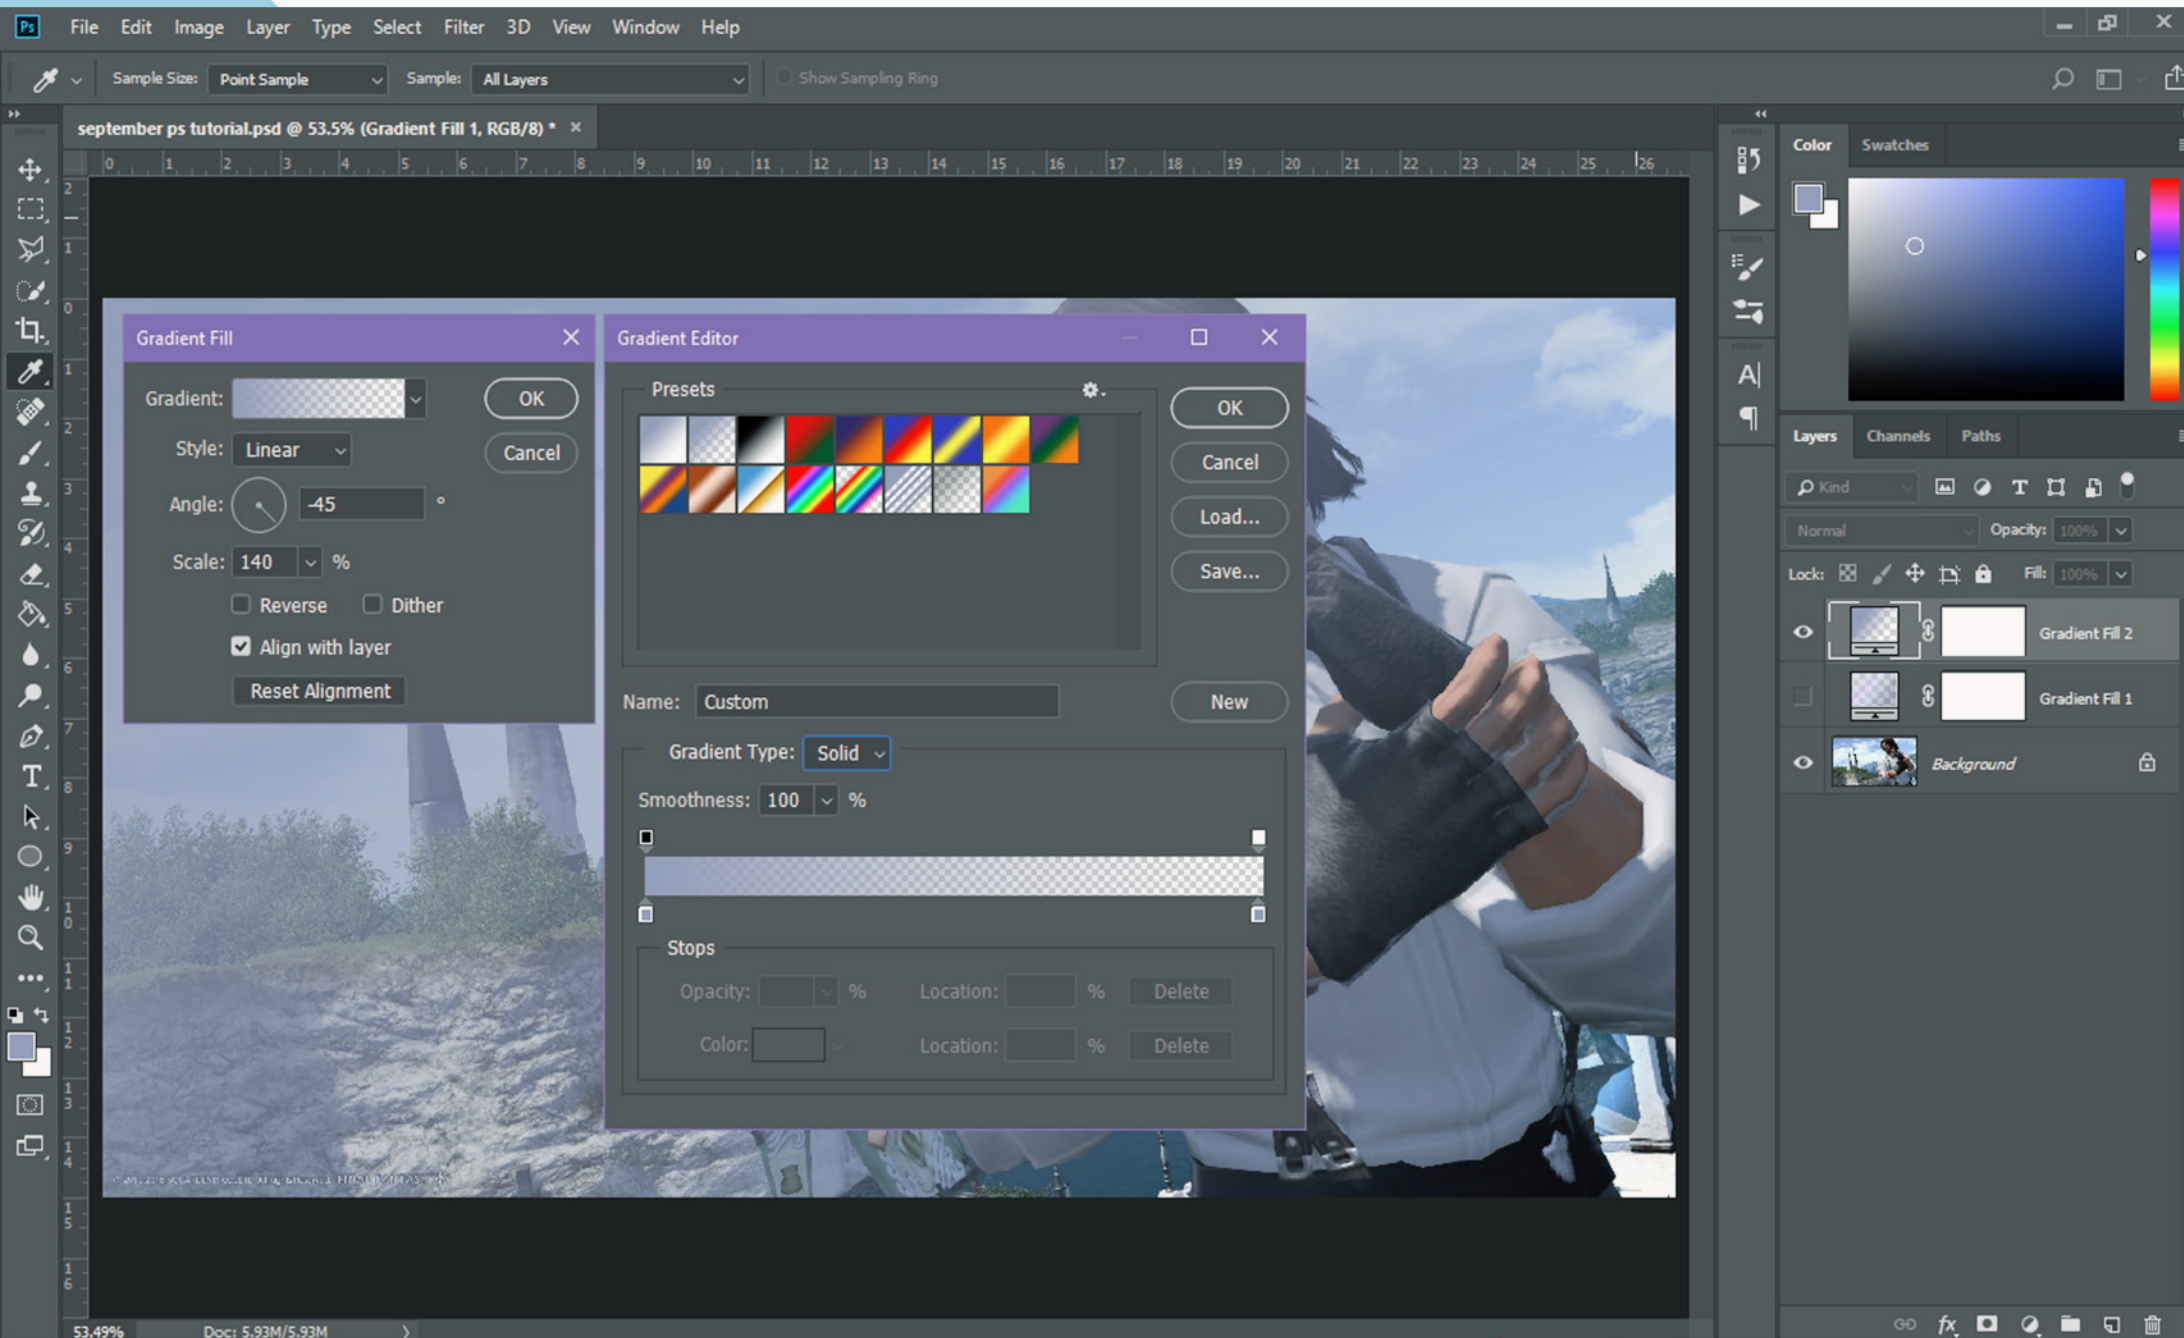

Step 2

A new window titled 'Gradient Fill' will pop up, and a gradient will be placed over your image. From this window, you can change the angle of your gradient, as well as the scale. These are purely up to you! Play around with them as you see fit, as you can always go back and change those values. For this example, I'll set the gradient at a -45° angle, and the scale to 140%.

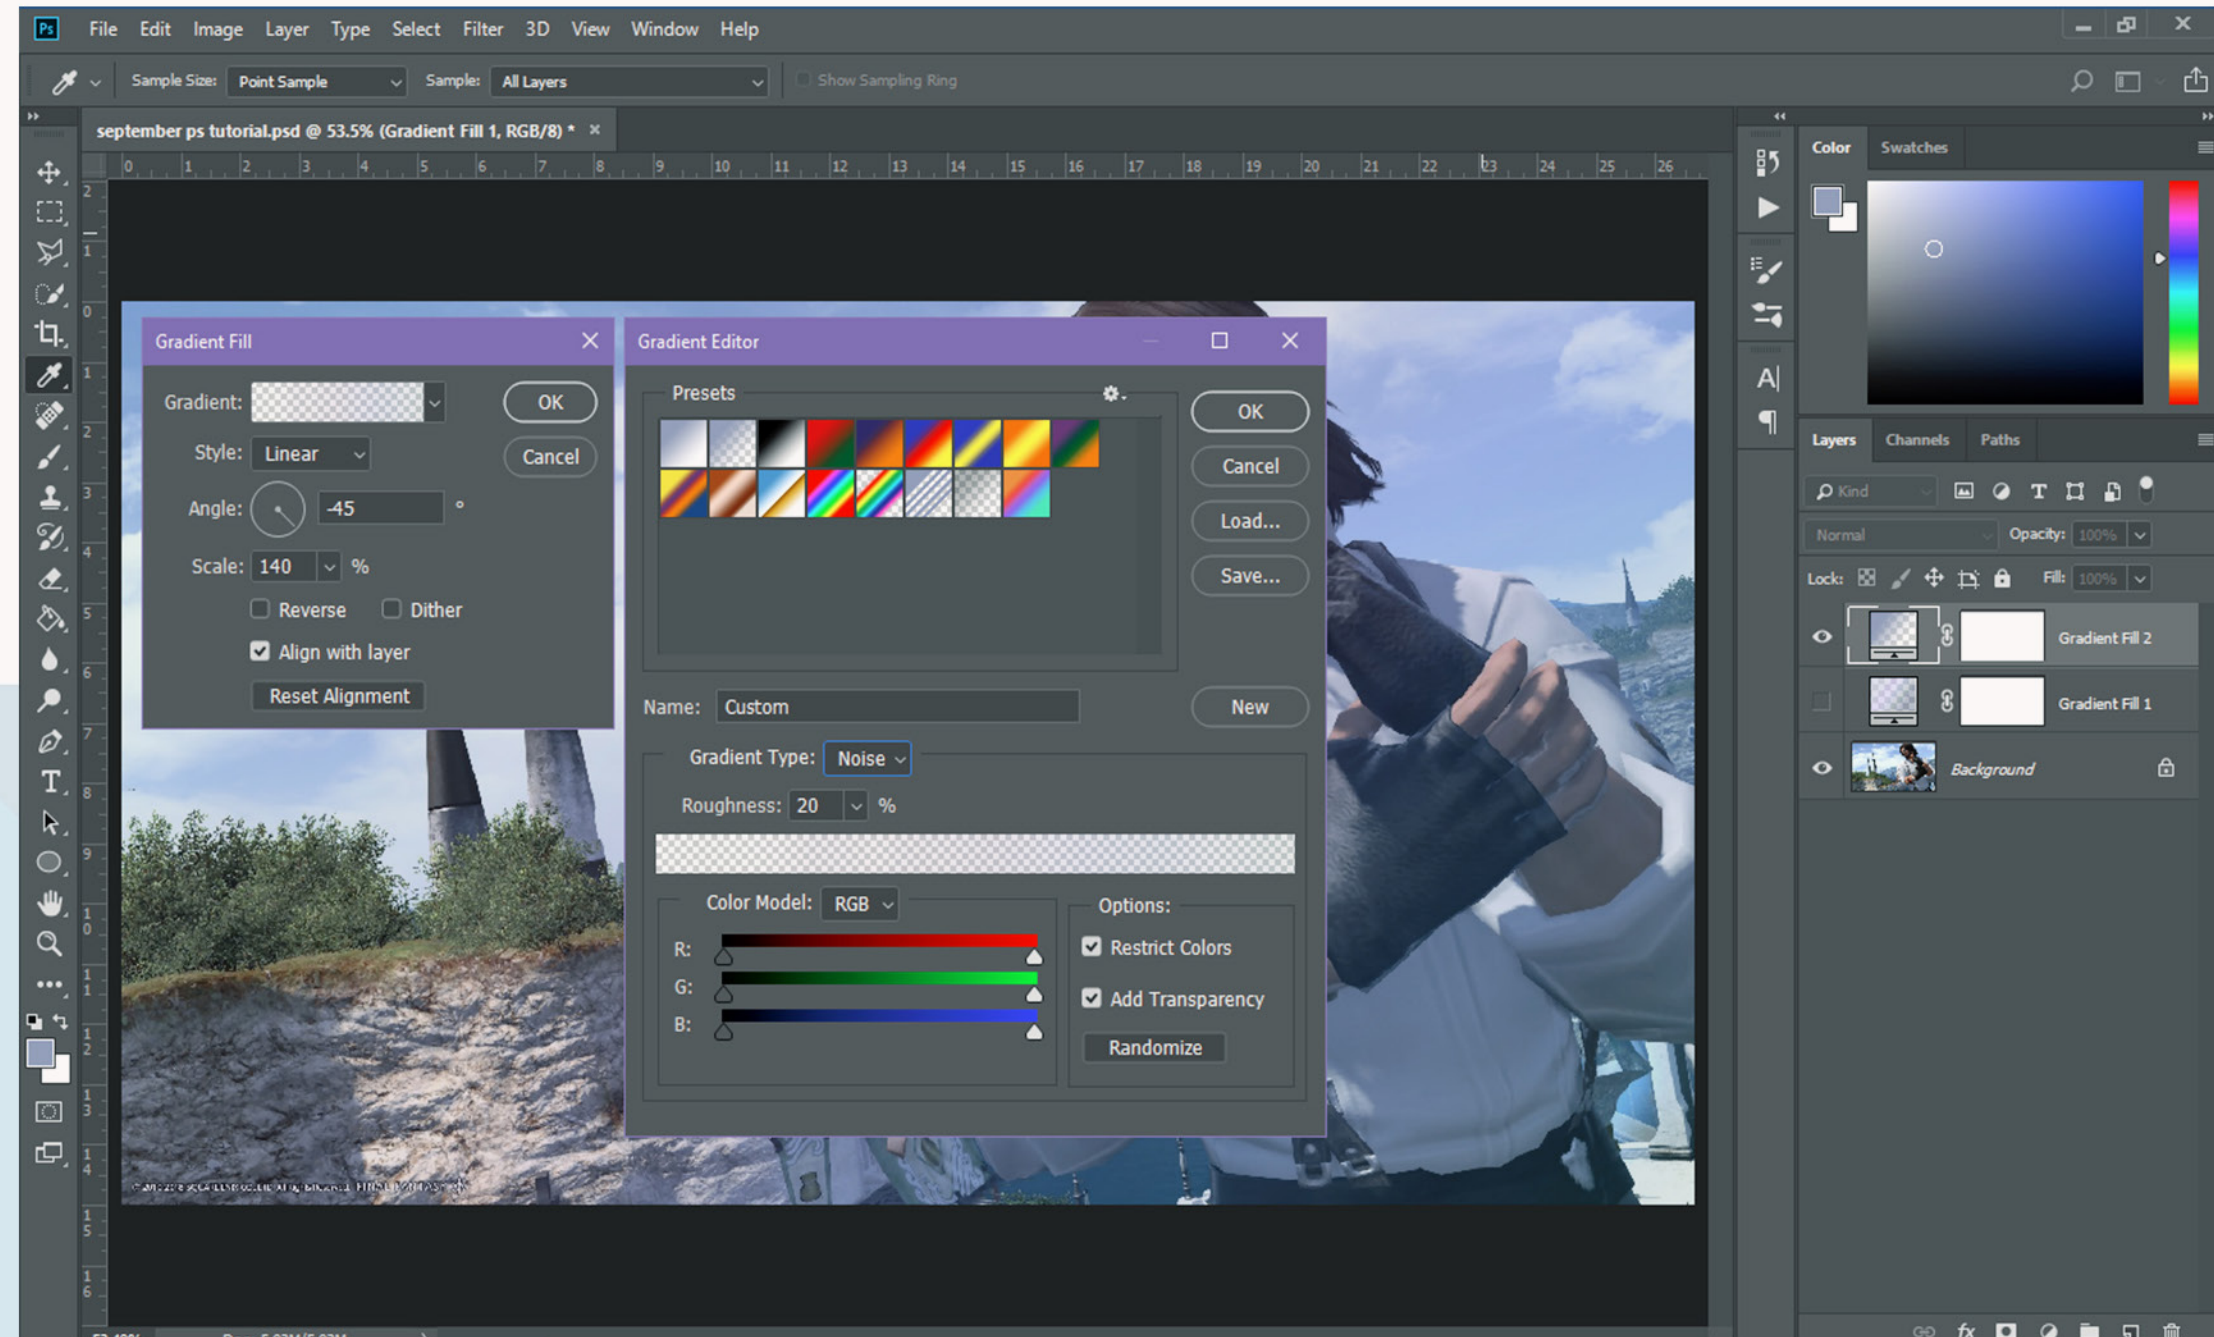

Step 3

Before you hit OK, click on the color box labeled as 'Gradient'. A new window will pop up titled 'Gradient Editor'. Ignoring the presets, click on the drop down menu by 'Gradient Type' and change it to 'Noise'. Your screenshot will be covered by a gradient, but it will look rough. To fix this, click on the 'Roughness' slider, and find a value you like. I find anywhere from 10 to 20% creates a nice, smooth gradient. To make your picture visible again, check 'Add transparency'.

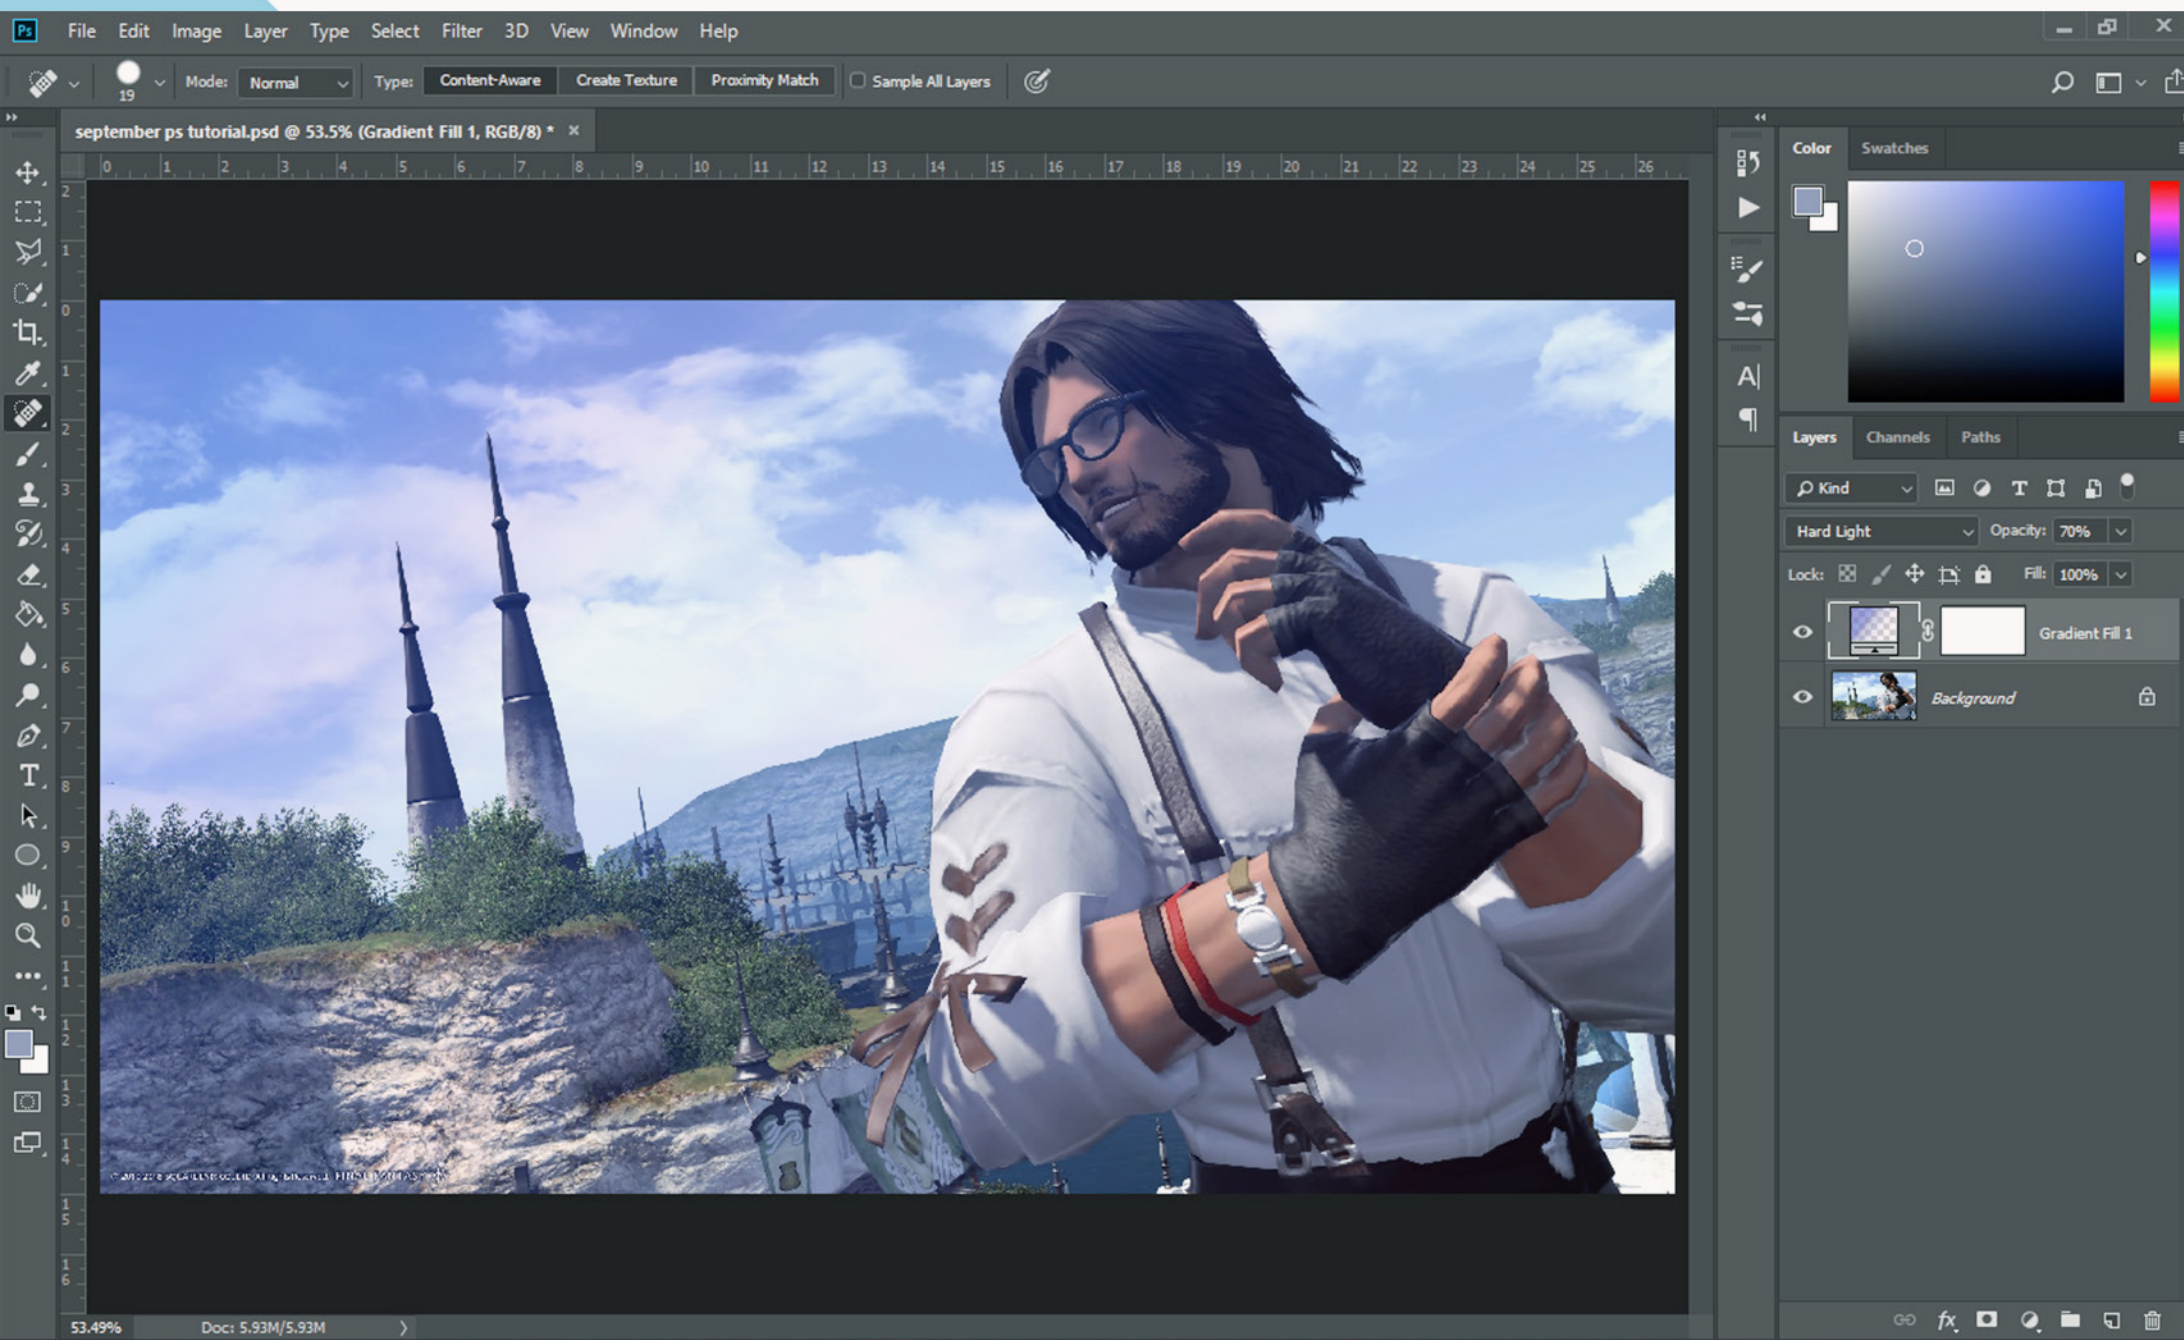

Step 4

Randomize! This is the fun part. Click on randomize, and Photoshop will cycle through an infinite amount of gradient combinations. Go slow, as you don't want to accidentally cycle past one you actually like. When you find one you like, click OK. Click OK once more to dismiss the Gradient Fill menu.

Step 5

To finish, we'll play around with the blend modes and opacity. With your Gradient Fill layer selected, click on the drop down menu where it says 'Normal'. This next part is purely experimental! Try out various blending modes and see which one you like best. I went with a Hard Light blending mode at 70% opacity.

And there you have it! It's a simple trick that can be combined seamlessly with any other edits you may do, and it can be undone at a moment's notice. I really hope you enjoyed this tutorial!

Yours truly,

Full-time Senpai
